

POETRY.

THE WORLD TO COME.

If all our hopes and all our fears
Were prisoned in life's narrow bound;
If, travellers thro' this vale of tears,
We saw no better world beyond:
Oh! what could check the longing sigh?
What earthly thing could pleasure give?
Or who would venture then, to die—
Or who would venture then to live?

Were life a dark and desert moor,
Where mists and clouds eternal spread
Their gloomy veil behind, before,
And tempests thunder overhead:
Where not a sunbeam breaks the gloom,
And not a flower smiles beneath,
Who would exist in such a tomb—
Who dwells in darkness and in death?

And such were life without the ray
Of our divine religion given;
'Tis this that makes our darkness day,
'Tis this that makes our earth a heaven!
Bright is the golden sun above,
And the beautiful flowers that bloom,
And all is joy, and all is love,
Reflected from the world to come!

NEVER AND AGUE—TO MY FRIENDS IN THE WEST, and particularly those who long since used LIFE MEDICINES in treatment of FEVER AND AGUE.

It is but a short time since these Medicines have been introduced in the Fever and Ague Districts, and the proprietor suffers himself that during that period, whenever they have been used according to the directions, they have done more towards extirpating the disease, than all other remedies and prescriptions combined. It is a common saying among "regular practitioners" when species are introduced, that they cannot cure diseases which people are in the habit of employing as remedies. Medical experience is continually doing what part of the list of the most rare diseases, and Mr. Moffat has the happiness of confidently announcing that Fever and Ague is now to be added to the number of maladies which modern skill has conquered.

In Fever and Ague the LIFE MEDICINES not only give quicker relief than any other remedy, but give it in, effect, a PERMANENT CURE, so that if the patient is only ordinarily feverish, and resorts directly to his medicine upon the first symptom of tendency to a new attack, it may always be ward off. To escape one chill would be of infinitely more consequence to the sufferer than the value of the remedy—to remove the disease permanently would confer a benefit upon him which cannot be estimated by any earthly standard. That these Medicines will effect what is here claimed for them, the Proprietor has the testimony of all acquainted with them and their application and use in the Fever and Ague, and his object in now addressing his friends at the West is to request them that they will spare no pains in communicating the experience, and disseminating this highly interesting information, now that the season for Fever and Ague has arrived.

It is not for the mere purpose of disposing of a few hundred packages of the Life Medicines, that the proprietor makes this appeal. The demand for his Medicines is already greater than he can conveniently supply; and even were it insufficient to afford him business, he would conceive himself supremely selfish, if his pleasure was not greater at the benefit conferred upon the suffering part of the community by an increase in his sales, than at his own pecuniary profit.

The Life Medicines, if properly used and preserved in, recommended themselves; still it is necessary that the public should know that such medicines exist, and the propriety of advertising them. It is hoped, therefore, that the proprietor will not be accused of egotism when he says that there is no malice or greed of treatment, except for fever and ague, as appropriate, thorough and positive in its action, as MOFFATT'S LIFE PILLS AND PHENIX BITTERS.

For further particulars of the above medicine see MOFFATT'S GOOD SAMARITAN, a copy of which accompanies the medicine. A copy may also be obtained of the different Agents who have the medicines for sale.*
